

The Right to Refuse Compelled Expression

No one shall be compelled to publicly recite pledges to any nation-state, to worship any deity, or to make an oath to any organization. Every person has the right to refuse state compelled expression.