

Reality and Fashion

In the spirit of {In:Individualism} Realists can and are encouraged to wear just about anything they want. There are of course some limitations on what is appropriate, or what is so strange, that it's not appropriate. But a realist can push the line some and should not be constrained by the tastes of others. One has the freedom to make their own decisions about how they want to physically appear and express who they are by how they choose to look.

There are limitations on this based on some common sense restrictions. There are places where nudity is accepted and places where it isn't. In general the Church of Reality accepts the culture of the City of San Francisco as a guideline as to what is too strange to wear. If it will get you arrested in San Francisco it's probably over the line.
