

What deserves the title GOD?

So, what, if anything, deserves the title GOD? What is the biggest thing that exists? What is that for which nothing can be greater? Is there something that is clearly and indisputably greater and bigger than everything else? If there is - we have our God candidate. We can then put the god candidate to the god tests to determine if our candidate deserves to be God.

Is Reality God? If Reality isn't God then there is no God.

There actually is a fairly obvious answer to this question, Reality deserves the title God! Reality is the sum total of everything that exists. Reality includes everything that is actually real. It includes everything in the universe. It includes all other universes in the multiverse if there is a multiverse. Reality includes all other realities that might actually be real. Reality would include all other god candidates of all other religions that actually exist. If anything is real, then it is a part of Reality. If something isn't part of Reality - then it doesn't exist. And if God doesn't exist - then it can't be God.

So - since Reality is the biggest and greatest then if anything is God it has to be Reality. If there were some other God candidate it would be a lesser God. And we all know that whatever God is - it's can't be lesser. In a God contest, Reality would always come out on top. Therefore if there were something that deserved the title God - it would be Reality. And if Reality isn't God - then there is no God.
